

All the time in the world

time frozen

Chapter 1 by PigletPinkPancake

I stood there waiting for someone to move. But no one did. Nothing happened. It was like everything was frozen. Everything except me. I stared around, the students frozen in place. The rain frozen in the sky outside the window. Nothing made a sound. Nothing at all.

It was almost time to go. But what time? Nothing was moving. Nothing at all. I had time. All of it. I walked out the room. The hallways were dim and filled with students. I walked through the students. None of them budged. Not any of them. I ran through the halls. Running as fast as I could. I reached the doors and pushed them open. And someone was out there. Someone moving.

"Wait!" I shouted. "Please! I need to talk to you!"

The figure kept running. From behind, I couldn't tell if it was a male or female. He/she had dark brown hair cut short, but messily, almost shaggy.

I wove my way through the frozen cars, out of breath, but forcing myself to keep running.

"Please! I just need some answers!"

Suddenly, he/she stopped suddenly, but I didn't know. I was looking at him/her with cold golden eyes. It was a female. She was the most beautiful woman I had ever seen. She was in her mid-thirties, with a pixie face and the sexiest smile I had ever seen. She was beautiful, of course, but I'd never seen golden eyes so vibrant. "What do you care to know?" Her voice was low and lilting, deeper than I expected.

"Why is time frozen? Why can I move? What caused it?" I pant.

She tilts her head to the side, and smiles. "I'm afraid that those questions can't be answered.

Those answers can't be found quite yet."

The woman smiled again, then snapped her fingers and vanished, leaving me alone in the frozen world.
